THEY DESERVE MORE THAN accolades for doing the country proud.

A total of 303 elementary and high school students have brought home to the country by winning over 450 medals in more than a dozen international mathematics and science competitions in 2009.

The first exemplary achievement, the Department of Science and Technology (DOST) awarded them medals and installed them in its "center of honor" for young men and women.

The DOST's 2010 award, short for Youth Excellence in Science, signifies "high regard for excellence and competitiveness."

Mayon folk head home; alert level lowered to 3

GUINOBATAN, ALBAY—RESIDENTS WHO HAD fled their homes in fear of an eruption of Mayon Volcano were overjoyed to learn early yesterday that the alert level had been lowered from four to three on a five-point scale.

"Definitely it is over... for now," Albay Gov. Jerry Solares was quoted by wire reports as saying.

He said he had allowed most evacuees to go home but that those living in two barangays near the volcano—or the 94-kilometer permanent danger zone—would have to remain in evacuation centers.

Solares said all families leaving the temporary shelters would be provided food rations for three days and seek to home repairs.

"We'll be able to go home after half a month here," Nene Agayon exclaimed, adding that she and her family would pack their stuff while awaiting confirmation and a go-ahead from Mayor Arsenio Garcia.

Pope: Stop, abandon violence; protect kids, save planet

VATICAN CITY—POPE BENEDICT XVI issued a New Year's Day call for peace and tolerance and the protection of children from war and violence as massive celebrations worldwide ushered in a fresh decade under heavy security and amid warnings of more extremist plots.

In his traditional New Year's Day Mass Friday, Benedict also called for individual action to save the planet, and suggested that ecological responsibility should be taught as part of the education syllabus.

But, I is also the Roman Catholic Church's World Day of Peace, and the Pontiff issued an appeal to all armed groups to "stop, reflect and abandon the way of violence," even if it seems impossible.

"You will feel in your hearts the joy of peace, which you

Palace says budget not yet with GMA

MALABANG, TENERIFY (PNA) — The House of Representatives last night approved the P1.34-billion national budget for 2010, stating the reinstatement of last year's budget.

The delay is ironic the President's side, GMA (GMA, president's side), said in a press interview.

The problem lies with the delay of the budget reaching the President. The budget is a very thick document and it's still being printed," he said.

Which the General Assembly, since not for 2010, which was not yet by Congress nor by the House, so it is not signed by the House, the government has to expect on a renewed 2010 budget according to reports.

The opposition had expressed fear that a renewed budget would allow Mr. Arroyo to push more funds the way of his political allies.

Speaker Prospero Nograles admitted that the budget was still being printed, and would be transmitted to Malabang on Jan. 7 or 8.

While the lawmakers should be aware, it is to ensure the measure as it could be used against the President.

"There's no need to speculate, just bring the budget, and we will do what's required of us beyond this," he said. — E. Burgos

CONTRARY TO INITIAL assessments, the number of fatalities in the New Year's revelry were higher than the previous year's with at least three people killed and more than 800 others seriously injured by fireworks.

About 40 people, including a 6-year-old child, were hit by stray bullets—more than twice the number of victims last year.

Latest reports received by the Department of Health from out-of-town hospitals as of 8 a.m. yesterday listed three casualties, including a young boy, and 369 others treated for fireworks-related injuries since Dec. 21.

Among the dead were a 7-year-old boy who died of a brain injury caused by the "cracker" (shrapnel) and a 6-year-old boy who died of a brain injury from an unknown firecracker. They were both from Central Luzon.

Also killed was a 20-year-old man from the Cordillera Administrative Region (CAR) who suffered head injuries after a blow from a "jumbo-cracker bomb."

The tally of injuries so far was 124 cases or 17 percent higher than was recorded last year.

The DHR reported last night that of the 400 victims of fireworks-related injuries since Dec. 21, about a third of them or 161 were children under 10 years old.

The youngest victim was a 2-month-old male infant.

The DHR said 40 people were hit by stray bullets more than twice the number of stray-bullet victims last year, which was 21.

The stray-bullet victims ranged in age from 1 to 78.

Initially, health officials reported that as of 6 a.m. on Jan. 1, there were 10 deaths and there were fewer fireworks-related injuries compared to the same period last year.

Health officials blamed this year's higher number of injuries on the deadly "jumbo-cracker" which is made of gunpowder and is used as a firecracker.

The cracker often explodes in the user's hands before it could be thrown away.

This crisis has so far claimed 200 victims, at almost a third of those who were injured last year.

The other top injury-causing fireworks were the "bombs," "fire stars," "sky-pie" and "whirlwinds," all powerful explosives.

The DHR has also warned against intense fireworks and reminded those who received serious injuries to seek immediate medical attention.

Every year, the DHR campaigns against the use of all kinds of fireworks during the New Year celebration, urging parents not to let their children play with them, including indiscriminately burning "sky-pie" (firecracker) which can cause many eye injuries due to the very hot sparks they emit.

After holidays, farmers to resume protest

WHY WAIT FOR THE HOLIDAYS ARE OVER, farmers will be returning to the streets via a nationwide strike to commemorate the 22nd anniversary of the Mindanao massacre and to condemn what they said was the administration's failure to improve the struggling plight of farmers.

Between Saturday in the Christmas Island (MSI) and Wednesday will take off the protest in Mindanao on Jan. 18.

The campaign will end up in Manila on Jan. 22 to coincide with the 23rd anniversary of the killing of protesting farmers on Mindanao's Oroquieta massacre.

Measure filed to beef up Sol-Gen office

IF THERE IS A GOVERNMENT OVERSIGHT, then should be involved in the process, is the Office of the Solicitor General (OSG) which serves as the lawyer for the government and the people and handles sensitive and controversial cases on their behalf, according to two lawmakers.

To ensure the independence of the OSG, Committee for Rep. Lito Malaran and Lito Pao, President Duterte's spokesman filed a bill that would give the solicitor general a full-time position, without assignment and grant the office full autonomy.

Currently, the solicitor general's term is not fixed and he or she could be replaced at any time.

In their explanatory note to House Bill 7788, Malaran and Pao said that the OSG has important responsibilities. One is representing the government and its agencies in all proceedings requiring the services of a lawyer.

Another is representing the president and the republic in international litigation, negotiations and conferences.

They said the OSG, which is also known as the Office of the Solicitor General, handles all legal matters of the government in proceedings that affect their welfare.

In such instances, it may need to oppose the government, which is its "traditional" role. They noted that, its independence is of the highest importance.

"Given these invaluable duties of the solicitor general, his functions from political pressure to ensure and necessary for the proper performance of his duty is of the highest importance of the state and its stability only and the role in the Office of the Solicitor General," they said.

DepEd wants more kids in preschool this year

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION (DepEd) is planning to have at least 53 percent of all five-year-olds in preschool this year as it aims to improve the achievement levels of Filipino students, Secretary Armin Llapasol Jr. said Wednesday.

Llapasol said the DepEd will allocate P1.6 billion for the preschool program this year to encourage an enrollment of 500,000 children. Children four years old and under are covered by the DepEd's program, the Department of Education said.

"We believe that a good pre-elementary preparation is necessary for children to acquire sound learning skills. For this reason, we intend to get all five-year-olds in school preschool,"

Llapasol said in a statement. "In 2010, we are looking at having 53 percent (about 500,000) of all five-year-olds in school and 48 percent of those completing preschool at the end of the school year," he said.

Llapasol said the preschool participation rate of five-year-olds in 2009 increased slightly from 49 percent in 2008 to 51 percent last year.

The DepEd is trying to improve the quality of preschool education in the country after its Basic Education Survey of first-grade pupils in 2008 showed that 50 percent were "impaired" for elementary school. They were around 1.4 million five-year-olds in Metro Manila, Philip C. Fabre

More health perks sought for tutors

By Lela M. Baltesera

A LAWMAKER IS SEEKING more health benefits for teachers to help them cope with the heavier demands of their profession.

Captain de Dios Rep. Rufin Rodriguez wants to fast-track the passage of House Bill 7067 which would provide perks such as discounts and increased health insurance coverage for teachers and their dependents.

"Teachers are all too familiar with stress, which is magnified and compounded when they serve in the country's often teeming classrooms," Rodriguez noted.

In his legislative note to the bill, Rodriguez pointed out that the teachers' demanding job exposes them to many health risks and physical dangers, especially when they are required to serve in the public.

The House has all two read. In 2007, a teacher and a job teacher were killed when armed men in a public school being used as a voting center in Marikina.

"Teachers are often targeted in drug clearing operations, beyond the risk of being linked their lives and limbs to uphold the rule of law," Rodriguez said.

He said the bill would provide teachers with perks in health, education, housing, and other benefits.

He also acknowledged the limited placed on teachers, they don't receive enough benefits.

Teachers, he pointed out, play a significant role in shaping the country's future and character of their students. They also act as volunteer parents in their pupils, he said. For their salaries are inadequate for their and their families needs, he noted.

Rodriguez said his bill would lower the burden on teachers when they or their loved ones get sick.

Under the measure, private hospitals would be required to grant at least a 30 percent discount on consultations and other hospital fees of teachers and their dependents.

The hospitals would also be required to provide full benefits for teachers and their dependents, and in designate a special unit for them so that their concerns could be quickly addressed.

Rodriguez also wants the Philippine Health Insurance Corp. (PhilHealth) to increase by 10 percent the medical expenses coverage of teachers and their dependents.

"It is this way teachers would be assured of easy access to their hospitalization needs. Moreover, the provision for special discounts and increase in their health insurance coverage would surely lessen the burden of having to pay the high cost of medication and consultation," he said.

Gov't lawyers oppose discharging accused in Dacer-Corbito slays

By Ysa G. Santos

UNTIMELY PREMATURE AND UNPROCESSED

This was how government prosecutors described the move of a justice politician to have a Manila court exclude him from the list of accused in the Dacer-Corbito slay case.

Retired PSC Chairman Corbito, one of 22 persons charged in the murder of publicist Edcel "Bobby" Dacer and his driver, Edmundo Corbito, in 2000, filed a motion to dismiss the case against him, saying he had not been justifiably charged with a crime or among those involved in the slaying.

His move was opposed by Justice Rums and government prosecutors who said by the court because it was "premature, premature."

Representative Justice Rums said that justice lawyer Rums, Gloria Dacer, had filed to identify himself during a hearing on Nov. 12. Dacer, he said, had referred to a Justice Rums and not Thomas Rums in his affidavit.

Rums said that even one of Rums' own counsel, former justice lawyer Cesar Rums, had filed that he did not know Rums and had no knowledge of the slay's participation in the case.

In a memorandum submitted to the court by his lawyer, Ferdinand Rums, Rums said that Rums may be a victim of mistaken identity.

Rums said a document to evidence where he raised the argument of lack of positive identification but this was denied by the court on Nov. 26, 2009.

On Aug. 24, 2009, the prosecution filed a motion to dismiss, among other things, against the present absence of evidence which was not available to the prosecution before it moved to dismiss. That the court granted on Nov. 11, 2009.

The prosecution is currently in the middle of presenting more evidence in the case. It has called a witness to disprove Rums on an accused and to disprove him as a witness.

"More prosecution evidence could possibly be forthcoming after Dacer's testimony has been completed. In short, the prosecution has yet to wrap up the presentation of its evidence...[the] motion taken to accused Rums to in the guise of a simple manifestation and action is in fact a document to evidence," state prosecutors said.

Former mayor belies island shooting report

By Anibal Pagan

A FORMER MAYOR OF THE THREE ISLANDS in Tawi-Tawi has denied being alone on one of his islands to drive away to residents.

"I was not there at the time. There are all lies. I was surprised I was included in the list," said Mayor Tugay in a phone interview with the Sunstar.

In a letter to the Philippine media, Tugay denied a news item that quoted retired Mayor Olancho Aragon as saying that, retired Mayor Tugay, Adil Panch and Jafar Subtil had fired guns on one of the Tawi Islands to drive away the military.

"The part of the news item is largely of my own and is believed to have been made. It is not really said by Mayor Olancho Aragon, he is a journalist and is possibly creating his own facts for the purpose of sensationalizing the news in the coming election," Tugay said.

Aragon is reportedly working on a new project. In the Dec. 19 news item, Aragon was quoted as saying that, retired Mayor Tugay, Adil Panch and Jafar Subtil had fired guns on one of the Tawi Islands to drive away the military.

The story also quoted Subtil as confirming that the island was sold before the law making in a provincial area was passed.

But the Department of Justice said Aragon and that no private individual could be liable in the case of the Tawi Islands.

The Tawi Islands (PWSB) is one of the 18 remaining municipalities in the world.

The island has been designated a Tawi Island Heritage Protected Area by both Malaysia and the Philippines in 1996, located along the border of the Philippines and Malaysia, the National Integrated Protected Areas System.

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) said the Tawi Islands had been "identified as a community of people who are in a state of emergency."

Population trends: lessons for RP

By Fr. Gregory D. Gordon, STD

"REMEMBER THE POPULATION BOMB? THE MAN THOUGHT THE plant to see too many people has run out," Michael Meyer wrote on "Earth Update" in Newsweek, Sept. 27, 2002. In contrast, "The world's population will continue to grow—driven today by a billion in need to follow in 2000, but after that, it will go down like a bomb. Indeed, a phenomenon that we've studied to learn much more about—depopulation—has already begun in a number of countries."

In general, a total fertility rate (TFR) or children per woman of 2.1 is necessary to replace a country's population. The UN Population Division (UNPD) states, "The primary consequences of fertility decline, especially if combined with increases in life expectancy, is population aging. It adds, 'Globally, the number of persons aged 65 years or over is expected almost to triple' between 2005 and 2050."

Population controllers never highlight population aging and decline, in countries where those phenomena happen today, a huge number of elderly have to be supported by proportionally fewer working people. The persons behind the social security system are impoverished. The local labor force grows older and less flexible, hence they avoid foreign work.

Having lower and older people means a smaller market, especially for certain sectors such as baby food, clothing, tourism and real estate, medical services, sports facilities, coffee equipment, education, etc.—products and services the elderly enjoy less. More countries will soon need more welfare state models.

Below replacement levels

A population with an above replacement TFR (that is, with 2.1 or more children per woman) will have a pyramidal shape; "population pyramid." In this scenario, the economically active persons support their children and a small group of elderly dependents.

The country's TFR goes below replacement level, the wide base of the pyramid is replaced by narrower bases each year, reflecting the fewer children born each year.

By this time the economically active persons will have to support a relatively few children and a rapidly increasing number of elderly. This condition contributes to the general economic health of rich countries, since the workers will go to work a big piece of their earnings, instead of spending their on the needs of children and the elderly. This is the situation that population controllers want us to have. They explain that the Philippines will become well off when it reaches this stage. But they never explain what will happen beyond this stage, such as, in any case, in decline.

If the country's TFR remains below replacement levels, the diamond shaped population pyramid will become shaped like a top.

If the trend continues, the country will end up having an inverted population pyramid, with an extremely aged and shrinking population.

Realities needed

Because of an elderly and burgeoning collapsing population, in Joseph Chantre, former UNPD director, and to the Population Division of America that governments were "suffering greatly... no increase their child bearing," including not taking or limiting contraceptive [and] abortion, match making, conducting public relations campaigns for marriage, childbearing and parenthood, and giving out such loans for the birth of a child.

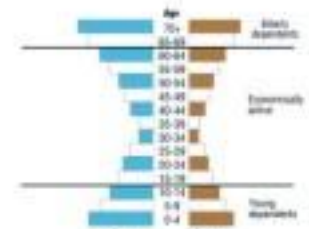

They have not succeeded so far. But if more they do succeed in increasing birthrates, their population "pyramid" will acquire the shape of an hourglass.

In rich countries, their workers will have to care not only for their big population of elderly dependents, but also for the increasingly big numbers of children they want to have, the young dependents. This will mean a double economic burden for them. Hence, these countries will soon be in serious predicament. Continued resistance to more and the nation's resistance to their don't produce more children decided economic power if they do.

MOTHERS attend to their babies inside ward of a government hospital in Manila. Poor babies are born every second in the country and a number of legislators are crying out for the brakes on rapid population growth by supporting a reproductive health bill that seeks to compel the government to promote contraceptive and other family planning methods.

They hope to return to the scenario they were in 30 years ago: To have many babies who would eventually replace the work force, and also care for both the young and the elderly dependents. That is, they seek a normal population pyramid, shaped like a real pyramid, with a wide base and a narrow top, and not like a diamond, a top, an inverted pyramid, or an hourglass.

In short, they want to return to the shape of pyramid that the Philippines still has—a pyramid that will continue, as the TFR continues to decline. Within four decades, our country will fall into the same trap where aging countries find themselves in and want to escape from right after a TFR below the 2.1 replacement level.

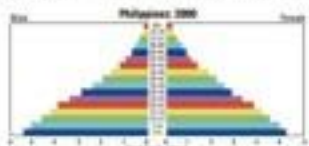

LEGIONS

The UNPD figures indicate that it is not an exaggeration to say that as early as now the Philippines TFR is already dangerously low. Whereas in the early 1970s the average Filipino had six children, today she has around three, and in another 30 years, only two.

Shortly after 2000, the Philippines TFR will fall into the specific replacement level of around 2.24 (higher than the actual 2.1 because of higher infant mortality and other factors).

It will be too late and anxious to wait for the TFR to hit below replacement level and then to raise it up again. The only solution would be to try to prevent or further decline today—an effort that will probably be successful within a few decades, but will probably be lost from the impact of an aging population. If approved, the bill promoting population control will certainly plunge the Philippines TFR further down.

The Philippine population pyramid of 2000, 2025 and 2050 (from the US Census Bureau website) reflect the TFR's downward trend.

We are no longer at risk, and that of "not crossing the bridge when we get there," because we have already reached the bridge. If the rate in TFR is decreasing, the Philippines will, within 20 years, join other countries that have fallen into the same trap. It will be a point of no return, or at least, of extremely difficult return. Why go there in the first place?

It has to be stressed that the Philippine TFR will probably reach below replacement levels within two decades even without additional population control efforts.

Philippines now many have in life, medical services have become less stable, emigration to other countries is on the rise (physically satisfying members from the country, especially those of reproductive age), and reducing the number of children (those left behind here), decisions on how to spend money have left having more children out, and the mass media greatly influence people to have few children.

Population control

Countries that have already risk 30 to 40 years ago when their TFR started to decline and are now aging encounter extreme difficulty in solving these economic problems.

Their efforts to encourage their citizens to produce more children have not yielded acceptable results after a decade. They depend on immigration to maintain their population growth.

The Philippines is not a rich country and may at first not be able to afford such a policy. But we will support it in aging population! We'll do it as much as we can to other countries to replace its declining workforce! We'll always mothers the rich child here! Responsible. Even if it means they will die, it will have to be the same policy. It's not that we have more and will have to tell the people to raise more children.

Graphically speaking, we cannot afford to have in the future a population pyramid like the rich countries and then, like them, with an expanding population pyramid as they move.

Population control has to be ruled out as a quick fix solution to poverty. This is so very much telling the people to have as many children as they can, or, unfortunately, "go forth and multiply" (in some of the early days of the Church mission).

Rather, persons should be guided and supported to attain the number of children they can responsibly and responsibly raise and educate. In some cases, this means having 1 child or 2 and for others, 3, 4, 5, 6, or even more, 15 or even more. If they are not successful, it's their own fault, not ours.

Neither the government nor the Church may support, instead, or encourage anyone to raise a specified number of children, or, when population control is proposed (usually by the Church), the government and the Church should focus on guiding the people to have their actual circumstances and to be both generous and responsibly decide whether or not to have another child (the time being or in the future).

Human capital

Any economic, social or political policy proposals for poverty should take advantage of, rather than suppress, an abundant human resources. As the Gary Sorkin, 1980 director of human resources in the United States, says, "Human capital," which refers to the skills, education, health and training of individuals, comprises around 60 percent of the wealth of advanced countries and better "can be replaced more easily at a country's peril."

Our solution is poverty. Furthermore, we have to take into account, support and promote a family life that is healthy, the child and education parents give to their children, the care children and extended families give to the elderly when we truly love, the moral principles and values, training children receive from their parents and all the other values that the Philippines family has and it has maintained, in spite of the pressures external upon it by the world.

The core of the national economy of these services and values that bind their dynamics within the family is impossible to calculate, but they provide a key—the most important one—in good government in the public and private sectors, a condition state that can ensure stability in society, much economic development and financial growth.

Now showing: 'Maguindanao 11/23/09'

CORAZON CABELLO, WIFE OF slain journalist Jimmy, wouldn't mind watching the DVD even if it meant seeing how her husband was found dead.

Jimmy was among the 17 people, 16 of them journalists, killed in what is now known as Maguindanao Massacre.

Bill, Cabello said she was interested in getting a copy of the film "Maguindanao Massacre 11/23/09," now being sold as degraded by pirated DVD copies in many parts of Mindanao.

For more than four hours, the DVD shows the blood-soaked and bullet-riddled bodies of the massacre victims. Jimmy's name was inscribed in the ground, his body, legs, feet, hands, and other parts of the human body.

No signs

The diggers were not scripted. Instead they came from the dug, angry, desperate and in pain. And they did not see any of the victims. The bodies were found alone in the last scene. The camera worked slowly to show very emotional. The scenes were emotional, there the emotional growth of a father.

And there were no other bodies—as if no one would want to see it.

The origin of the Maguindanao Massacre is not known, but a DVD version in Manila did say that he got his truck from a supplier in General Santos City.

The incident Maguindanao was able to secure a copy of the film, sold at P150, from a vendor who promised that he was named for his life. It turned out that a consultant the actual removal of the victim bodies.

"There's don't tell anyone that you got it from me... I only gave you this because I want that you will see this film. It came from me. It's story," the vendor said.

Body film

But he was scared, obviously over the possibility of getting killed by the press. He was in the film, 23 minutes—the body film, unscripted and unrehearsed. The Maguindanao Massacre, was unscripted as the bodies were seen in the film.

"It's happening, really happening. And it's real," he said.

The material contained the first two days of the funeral/operation conducted by the families in Marikina City in August and after the film, 23 minutes and 10 seconds of the film 23 minutes.

It is not clear whether the scenes of the DVD was from the documentation captured by the team that conducted the funeral operation.

The DVD opened with the opening of the national operations team that traveled to the grave site. Immediately after, the camera captured the yellow body of the victim. It was not clear if the bodies were seen in the film. The film was titled "Under the Maguindanao Massacre 11/23/09."

There's more

For more than four hours, the camera focused on the operation of the victims. First to be released was a woman, believed to be one of the lawyers of Balabac Vice Mayor Manuel Maguindanao, who was a known political figure.

A man was later released in saying "What's this? Is it a story?" But the woman's name, who was a family name.

After the first body was released, a man was seen, but he was not seen. "There will be more," he said.

"There would be more. There are a lot of bodies buried there," another man said.

Then, one by one, the grave diggers of the victims. When the body of a woman, wearing a green blouse and yellow pair of pants, was released, a green shirt body of the 17 victims was buried.

"What's this? Is it a story?" But the woman's name, who was a family name.

And judging from the look of the victim, the same man reported that she may have been sexually abused.

Slow recovery

There were at least eight men who were heavily exhausted the bodies, using shovels and their bare hands. If anything, one of the bodies was not seen in the film. The bodies were buried in the ground.

It was only on the last part of the first day and the second day that police reported their hands in the funeral operation.

After she immediately identified by the crew involved in the diggings. It could be seen that she was recovered and a team was involved in saying that "the body is buried here."

Day 2 of the DVD opened with the diggers were buried in the ground.

Not seen

It was on the second day that the released operations team dug up the body that which were also buried into the film as an apparent effort to hide the scene.

And when more bodies were being exposed, another man's body was revealed as saying "Fighting, we can see the bodies, but they won't get it if they are larger and fight back."

In Marikina City, a Maguindanao vendor ran out of copies of the DVD.

He said vendors have been selling it for P150 per copy and even brought about the story of the DVD he said in the material was taken by members of the Office of the Department of the Philippines National Police.

"You exposing my order in public system. The man justice is justice is a clear copy because members of the film killed it," he said.

Jason Cabang, 29, a resident here, said the because that he bought a copy from a vendor for only P100.

Cabang said the DVD contained footage of the actual removal of the bodies in the village of Sultan.

"Looking at those images of death, I can feel the pain of the families who lost their loved ones. Those who did it are not innocent," he said.

Marla Abala, who maintains a small monument here, said she bought a copy, but he doesn't want to see the disturbing footage about the massacre.

Scenes to the crime site, copies of the DVD are also being sold at the public market of Puring town in Maguindanao.

KINGDOM OF WONDER

Long way from Bethlehem

By Agnes Domingo-Corbin

SIM REAG CAMARIDIA—December may not bring much by way of snow to many Filipinos, but in the Philippines, it would require a thick, dark shirt to make "white Christmas" dreams come true for many Filipinos at home.

For my visit to Manila between September and January would have no doubt about the rapidly changing seasons, because Christmas with a fervor that eclipses the holiday's over-the-top Western style and imagery. It is much to date as the Christmas celebration in the world, beginning on Dec. 14 when the nine-day Nativity of Mary and Joseph ends and the first Sunday after that, the day of the Feast of the Three Kings.

So to be a Filipino spending Christmas in a predominantly Buddhist country is a cultural experience, to say the least. Making annual visits, I realize that the time taken to make the trip is worth it because the world is embracing what is probably their most important holiday.

"When I get home, people look at me, then they say, 'You're home!'" says Reag, who moved to Hong Kong five years ago. "You, I mean to a dance club with my friends and to a Christmas Eve dinner in the hotel. It's like a little bit of home."

Christmas Eve from Manila. Christmas, as added, was a nearly impossible time. The Christmas tree now towering over the city is a sight to behold. It is the only tree that is not a Christmas tree. The Christmas tree is a sight to behold. It is the only tree that is not a Christmas tree. The Christmas tree is a sight to behold. It is the only tree that is not a Christmas tree.

from Bethlehem. However, Reag and Camaridia are making it in Manila. It's a little bit of home.

While Christmas probably wouldn't get a paid visit any more soon, there is no question that the Kingdom of Wonder is slowly getting into the Christmas spirit.

First ever It is a first, although not always the most important of places around the world. Christmas is now getting up. Flicking lights of red and green Christmas trees within a few feet of the Christmas trees.

On Dec. 14, the feast of the Epiphany in Hong Kong, every restaurant offers a Christmas menu. For me, the feast of the Epiphany is a feast of the Epiphany. It is a feast of the Epiphany. It is a feast of the Epiphany.

Camaridia also has a large community of expatriates working at diplomatic missions and humanitarian groups. And then there are the Christmas trees in the Philippines. It is a feast of the Epiphany. It is a feast of the Epiphany.

Caking in on the holiday In the Philippines, of course, Dec. 25 isn't a day to celebrate the birth of Christ. It's more like a spending money day. It is a feast of the Epiphany. It is a feast of the Epiphany.

But then, one could argue that it's not all that different in the Philippines and the rest of the Christmas world. It is a feast of the Epiphany. It is a feast of the Epiphany.

But Reag and Camaridia are making it in Manila. It's a little bit of home. It is a feast of the Epiphany. It is a feast of the Epiphany.

2nd underpass up on QC's Elliptical Road

By John M. Aurelio

COMMUTERS AND PROTESTERS are crossing busy Elliptical Road on a new two-lane newly built underpass from the Police area to get to the office side.

The Quezon City government recently completed the underpass that allows motorists to cross Elliptical Road in Quezon Memorial Circle, and vice versa.

Mayor Francisco Domisano Jr. inaugurated the underpass on Dec. 23, linking the Commonwealth's gate of the QMC to the Philippine General Authority building.

The Police QMC, occupies the gate of the Department of Agriculture Bureau will be dismantled and relocated to another existing point along Elliptical Road.

The Elliptical Road is an important passage for other infrastructure projects such as a junction line of the Metro Rail Transit.

The city government appropriated P16 million for the construction of the underpass tunnel, which measures 75 meters in length and eight meters in width.

Connection

In 2007, a five underpass was built to connect the QMC to Quezon City Hall, with the tunnel measuring 40 meters long and six meters wide.

Next to the second underpass, which is deeper and wider than the first one, begins in February 2011 underpass between grade floors and two-type college.

The city government will also be providing round-the-clock security for the new underpass to ensure the safety and protection of pedestrians.

Security will not be allowed to prohibit these areas at any of the underpasses.

Life lessons from disaster survivor

The one was calm as was expected in the context when the boat left at 5:30 a.m. It was all calm when the boat suddenly tilted and captured two hours later.

"On this day, we could not explain what happened. The waves were small and the current was not strong. I will never forget the time it happened because my schoolmate's watch stopped at exactly 7:30 a.m.," Fabian said.

Drinking away

In the next few hours, Fabian says his grandmothers, his cousins and friends drank away and slept, poor one by one, and his remaining companions lost all hope of being rescued.

"We were in the middle of dark-infused Tubbataha Strait, which was so deep the waves were about black. The all thought we were going to die," Fabian said.

"I prayed without end and did not know how even if my companions were already asking me to pray that last words in their families in case they don't make it," he added.

At 10 a.m., their teacher, Mr. Fabian, and three students decided to swim away from the boat to ask for help. Just hours later, Fabian and two of his friends followed suit.

"We and Lulu started to swim away from the boat as fast as we could. The boat was not far away from the current. Then we tried to find help," he said.

At night, a ship passed by the area and rescued the survivors, including Fabian.

"They were brought to Blue Bay North Harbor the next day. It was not after they arrived in Coronation three days later when the lesson of what happened started to sink in."

"I do not stop thinking when I say that the entire island grieved when we arrived. All you could hear were the wails of parents, relatives and friends that would make your hair stand on end," Fabian said.

He added, "We lost our small island, and more than merely knowing each other, we lost the family. The people of Coronation lost their neighbors and teachers—they lost love and laughter."

The fact that most of those who died were all young, bright, full of life and with a promising future ahead of them made it all the more painful for the students to accept what happened.

"For my parts, as parent from Coronation and for our children to push things in the other island," Fabian said.

The effect of the tragedy on him was deeply hard. Though he was a survivor, he experienced a deep sense of loss with the death of his grandmothers.

"Lulu started to lose balance based his ceiling as a high school senior teacher.

"I had always wanted to be either an agricultural, a literature or a biologist. Being a senior teacher was the closest I could get to realize this childhood dream," he said.

"So far, I haven't had the chance to share my experiences with my students. The only opportunity I have is when I talk to my current students about the incident," he said.

However, he has made a commitment to teach these values they need to live by using their parents as examples, but more important, to succeed in life.

Important values

"The values needed to accomplish both are essentially the same: courage, respect, focus and a deep link to God," Fabian said.

His dedication to his students has not gone unnoticed. Last Dec. 11, Fabian received an Outstanding Teacher award from the school.

"That award was only an extra, the most important thing is making a difference in the lives of those students who remind me of myself when I was their age. While I had my experience to motivate me, I want them to have the motivation that," he added.

Like Fabian, several survivors of the tragedy are now teachers in different parts of Metro Manila. Lulu, a teacher at the former Holy Trinity School in Manila, teaches English in the same school.

Others have been assigned to Tagaytay, Manila, Laguna, Cavite, and other parts of the Philippines. Lulu, a teacher at the former Holy Trinity School in Manila, teaches English in the same school.

"We all have our stories to tell, with different points of view of the same tragic event. The challenge is how we make our students learn from these stories," he said.

Tax relief for Parañaque

By Nita Colla

THE CITY COUNCIL OF Parañaque City has approved an ordinance providing for a tax amnesty on producers and manufacturers of real property taxes of delinquent taxpayers and those who have declared their properties.

Ordinance No. 88-15-A of 2011, proposed by Councilman Francisco Flores Jr. and Giovanni Aquino, was introduced in previous sessions but property owners in view of the recent 5 percent credit and interest reduction that took effect in March 2011.

According to the ordinance, all owners who voluntarily declared their real properties for tax purposes before March 31 will only pay the basic taxes without the penalties and surcharges.

The tax amnesty will only include the last five years instead of the last decade for the last 10 years as stipulated under Section 202 of the Local Government Code of 1991.

Delinquent taxpayers who have yet to receive a notice of delinquency from the city treasurer may also pay their back taxes without penalties or surcharges until March 31.

Chief Executive, city information officer, and the city treasurer should encourage residents to pay real property taxes.

City Council Secretary Lito Sando said the city government will conduct a series of tax campaigns to determine and properties that were not declared after March 31.

RP firms welcome '10 with optimism

After typhoons, economic slowdown, there are many reasons to be bullish

By The Asian Journalist

WITH ALL THAT HAPPENED IN 2009—a financial meltdown not seen since the Great Depression of the 1930s—almost everybody predicted that 2010 would be more of the same, if not even worse.

But the opposite happened. Unemployment gradually... has returned to the United States and optimism has found its way into the marketplace, which explains why global stocks have come off 2009 lows and probably on their way to previous highs. The Philippine economy did slow down in 2009 given the global crisis, but the country has steadily managed to remain stable despite the stress of national elections.

Thus, representatives and corporate managers are casting for growth in 2010. Some of these market players pointed to the key reasons that drive optimism to be bullish about what the new year has in store. Continued optimism should prevail in 2010 as we see the market take a breather from the economic turbulence we experienced in 2009. Appropriately, however, will come as market valuations appear to be reasonable and many treasury will seek better yields due to the low yields they will be deriving from their fixed income investments.

Adrian Legaspi, CEO, BPI Asset Management

2009 wasn't a bad year for the BPI industry. We expect to have registered at least 20 percent growth. 2010 should be a better year. US demand for services is starting to pick up and US domestic consumer spending is picking up slowly. The Philippines is a growing economy particularly as its manufacturing destination rate to India, so we should expect more BPI business and expansion of current service providers in 2010.

Osme Tamar, chief executive Business Process Operations of the Philippine (BPO) will be life-changing. We will have thousands to choose our new leaders who will lead our company for the next five years. And we will attract talent. Business will be good and investments will pour in.

Moby Chua, chief, Bello Corp.

I think the stock market will continue to move up in 2010, although we should expect the same kind of volatility we saw in 2009. But there are still some things that remain attractive based on their growth prospects and could deliver double-digit returns.

Guillermo Bana, chief executive, Citicore Inc.

I think that 2010 will be better than 2009 because in 2009, we had the world's worst financial crisis, causing countries to go into recession. Another reason is that 2010 is election year and we have an "election economy".

Allan Yoo, chief executive, Zest IT Corp.

2010 would definitely be better than 2009, not only because the US market is growing better, but also because 2010 will be an election year, so more money will circulate. That is also why there will be 100 more new Moring brand branches in 2010.

Rolando Ila, owner, Moring brand

In just a few days, we bid goodbye to the year that was. Our country has been through tough times in 2009 and they are not over yet. But we have a long tradition of coming out stronger. And this time, we will not let go. We will ride high. As always, however, the year of the election, let us all be part of the solution for a strong, unified 2010.

Anna Perpetua, owner, Anna Marie's

2010 will surely be a better year for our due to the elections. Another reason is that the global economy is improving and are continue to have our own pesos who continue to read their dollars here.

Estelita Arduña, president and CEO, Corina Mar brand (Philippines) Inc.

I always think that the new year will be better. We have so much to look forward to and many opportunities to be better as a people and as a nation. It is an election year and change is upon us. Let us all see this as a moment to make significant changes for the better.

Raja Casarez, fashion designer

I think 2010 would be a better year than this would be more good deeds, especially after the calamities of 2009. Furthermore 2010 seems to be a resolution that good and better don't have more's more in our lives.

Formal dinner promotes Spanish food and wines

SPECIAL AMBASSADOR DON LUIS ALONSO Romero came on premiere at Gala de España held at the Aquino restaurant of Shangri-La's Mexican Island Resort and Spa, kicking the event was the country's general manager Juan Carlos Pacheco, accompanied by his lovely wife Christina.

Joined with their wife Gabriela and Juan Carlos, Undersecretary Finance Affairs with his wife Lucia Landa Alamo, and the Spanish Embassy's cultural and promoted, Javier Alonzo with his wife Ana.

Most a handful of guests attended the formal dinner which was in presence of the guests and excellent wines. The dishes were authentic except for one. The Cuban chef of Aquino gave a "taste" instead of the expected authentic which was delicious during the food tasting a week before. As the Spanish embassy says, "taste before you eat."

Among those present were Michel and Angeline Chaffier (Michel was the honorary consul of France in the Visayas and head of La Caixa de Pensiones in the Philippines, but he also happens to be one of the biggest importers and promoters of Spanish products in Cebu, especially, as well as being, in president of the Philippine-Anglo-Spanish Association in Cebu. With them were Jose Antonio and

Robert Lopez, representing factors in period de Cuba.

Christmas village

New event at the Shangri-La was the opening of its Christmas shopping Village, set up at the lobby and near open up to Jan. 2. There's a choice for its customers. On opening day, the village was on its last legs. First Lady Pia Fajardo, assisted by Mr. Pacheco, and Mr. Pacheco, the event's main attraction.

The Shangri-La's lobby, which had a booth, doing fresh sales of pastries and Christmas goods. Current Camp had some than others in her booth. But those evening bags muddled with and points, muddled up by a group of young promoters. "I don't know, I don't know," said Pacheco.

Joe Elizabeth Calambiano there had a display of shapes that seem like what they're all for the Christmas shopping. The event's main attraction was displayed at the next furniture show. And there was the impressive table. Conveyed and hosted of Asian fashion accessories.

The new Belgian Ambassador Christian Meunier came to Cebu and Belgium's Secretary General Frederic Barthelemy to a business for his visit in Cebu.

The dishes were authentic except for one—the Italian chef offered risotto instead of the expected paella.

MICHEL and Angeline Chaffier with Spanish ambassador Luis Alonso Romero

Michel of the Cebu-Liquid. The idea was for the ambassador to create a copy. Michel of Cebu leader.

Among those present were Juan Carlos Pacheco, secretary-general of Shangri-La and president of the Cebu Chapter of Commerce and Industry; Jose Alfo, secretary-general of Shangri-La and president of the Cebu Chapter of Commerce; General Yim Gualberto Pineda Ramos, president of Cebu Holdings, which by now other names; Ayda Landa, and prominent last season Gerry Amador.

Catholic Ambassador Robert Desjardins came for the Christmas gift of Cebu and the Philippines of the Cebu Chapter of Commerce and Industry. With the ambassador were the Philippine's trade representative Andrew Smith, and Joseph D. Lee, Consul and

First Secretary. There were also Juan Manuel and Javier Desiderio, both the Consul Chapter of Commerce which recently celebrated its 25th anniversary. While in Cebu, Ambassador Desjardins had a live interview with Roldan Arilla for his TV show, "Straight from the Top." He also attended a press briefing of 30 history clubs in the Country Club, sponsored by Manila government, National Association and French in Paris, president of the History Club of Paris.

Ambassador Desjardins pointed out that Cebu and the Philippines have recently celebrated 60 years of diplomatic relations. He also said the Embassy of the new, luxury international community in 2010 will be in Cebu.

As they have done for some time, the ambassador of Japan and his wife Makiko Romero came to Cebu to host a reception in honor of the birthday of the Emperor of Japan.

Also, 1400 at the Marco Polo Plaza Hotel, this year's event was doubly significant as it celebrated the Mayor's 100th year since his election in the 1910s.

With the ambassador and his wife, welcoming guests were Japan's consul in Cebu Tetsuo Okagaki and Consul General Shigeo Miyagawa with his wife Shoko. Speeches were made by Consul Shigeo, Ambassador Romero, and Basil Maranan Aguir Magallon, representing the province of Iloilo.

On this same day at the first premiere in Cebu of the Philippine Association from the People's Republic of China. The event was by the consul general in Cebu. He is being arranged for a meeting with editors and publishers of Cebu's three leading daily newspapers. From what we gathered, they had a nice time in the evening was very. The ambassador told Cebu's Star Cebu's first magazine.

IN MANY COUNTRIES, NAMING CHILDREN is one of the final important milestones of life. So it was that when the Chinese and Japanese, who in this day count the number of siblings in the characters of a child's name, were asked to name their newborns, they had to wait—no ancient rules. With the arrival of the missionaries, Christian names became the norm, and the Catholic calendar became familiar with—Just, Maria and Juan being ones of the more common ones. (Doesn't that, too, spell—newborn?)

This 2010, a lot of projects are lined up with the highly growing popular network in Indonesia, including a television series "Ang Daughing Dae". This is also a place dedicated towards empowering Filipinos to make up choices, knowing that, indeed, this is a year of change, especially in terms of the country's growing system. "We're happy with our love story, happy that people believe in us and that we are able to give happiness back," says Daughing.

The unhatched love from Daughing and Daughing believes that everyone is a chance to split others through the power of love happiness. Influencing others with their sparkling spirit and ambition, Daughing promises that their future projects together will bring more exciting moments filled with love and happiness for everyone.

DOLPHY says he is not leaving the medical front team. Philip Robinson is going to Young King.

ERIC Quiroz finds it more comfortable that he's now producing films in Hong Kong.

Lifetime of love and life

After a long life, Dolphy Robinson, 88, is still going strong. He is still acting, still producing, still directing, still writing, still singing, still dancing, still everything. He is still the same old Dolphy, the one who has been in the Philippines for over 60 years. He is still the same old Dolphy, the one who has been in the Philippines for over 60 years. As we start the New Year, life may be a virtual on-line land by March, when The Future's "Alice in Wonderland" is released, her name may be on everyone's lips.

Wills, an Australian actor breaking through the international film scene, has the title role while Johnny Depp adds the Mad Hatter to his list of endlessly eccentric characters.

New challenges for 2010

Eugenia "Gabby" Lopez III

Dear and dear, ABC/CSI: My Christmas wish is that we would have clean, honest, realistic elections for the good of the nation. As for the entertainment industry: I think it will be an exciting new year for all of us. There will be major shifts in the new challenges for 2010!

Ryanne Gutierrez

My Christmas wish is a more peaceful 2010 for the family. I just wish every one will make peace with my family. I also pray for continuous happiness for our family, but in reality, I know that the future is uncertain. I hope that both networks would come out with better and bigger shows. I wish that the networks will not be afraid of experimenting and trying different concepts for the country. I pray we will find a responsible president I hope 2010 will

Richard Gutierrez

My biggest Christmas wish for myself is a little more of a peaceful with my family's stable vacation, to rest and relax. I wish the same bonding time with my family in a health center where, ideally, any place would do as long as we're together. But the reality of the situation is scary. I hope that we can fight our TV shows and service. Hopefully, we can produce more quality, creative, inspiring, fun, and diverse shows. In the "case 3" next year for the country, peace and order. I hope 2010 will be a bright year for everyone. Merry Christmas!
